House Authorizes Funds For 21 More MX Missiles

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives has voted, 219213, to release $1.5 billion to build 21 additional MX missiles. Almost one-fourth of the Democrats joined most of the Republicans in siding with President Ronald Reagan.

Sixty-one Democrats and 158 Republicans supported the resolution Tuesday authorizing release of the funds, while 189 Democrats, including the entire Democratic leadership, and 24 Republicans

The MX, for missile experimental, is designed to replace the curpart is designed to operate the current generation of intercontinental ballistic missiles. It was first proposed in 1972 during the Nixon administration and has been a subject of intense congressional scruti-ny since 1977, when the Carter administration attempted to accelerate development.

Congress has never blocked the missile but has often put conditions on its development.

For the funds to be released, Mr. Reagan needed to win Tuesday's authorization and another vote Wednesday or Thursday on a fund-ing measure. The Republican-led Senate approved the funds last week by a much wider margin.

Representative Edward J. Markey, Democrat of Massachusetts, a ing opponent of the MX, said that only three lawmakers would have to switch their votes for the missile to be defeated. "The fight is not over," he said.

However, MX opponents stopped short of predicting that they could reverse Tuesday's outcome, saying that most lawmakers have made up their minds on the issue and that few were likely to

Richard and Tina Cisneros, who have lived with their three children in a motel room in the Los Angeles area since moving three months ago from New Mexico, say their goal of finding more suitable housing is as elusive as when they arrived.

The motel room costs $140 a week. Together they bring home $319 weekly from their jobs, and from what is left they have to pay for food and clothes, gasoline for their car, storage for their furniture, doctor bills for the children and medicine for Richard, who is an epileptic. Conservative Unit Obtains List of CBS Shareholders

New York Times Service

NEW YORK - CBS Inc. has turned over its list of shareholders to Fairness in Media, a conservative group that hopes to take over CBS to end what it contends is the network's liberal bias in reporting

CBS relinquished the list Tuesday after Fairness in Media, allied with the Republican senator Jesse Helms of North Carolina, agreed to conditions for its use. Earlier this month, U.S. District Judge William C. Conner told CBS and Fairness in Media to find a means by which prevent Fairness in Media from securing the list unless its members could give assurances that it would not be used for political fund-raising. Shortly after CBS filed suit, Hoover Adams, an owner of 11 shares of stock, sued CBS for the list on behalf of Fairness in Media. By law, shareholders are entitled to receive lists of stockholders to influence corporate policies, and many liberal groups over the years have used such lists to introduce resolutions on such issues as minority employment, environmental protection and divestiture of operations in South Africa.

Reagan administration plans to deploy 100 new missiles in silos at Warren Air Force Base, which stretches across eastern Wyoming and western Nebraska. It wants to buy 123 more missiles for spares and for testing under operational conditions. Congress already has authorized the purchase of 21 combat-ready missiles. Delivery of that batch is to begin in the spring of 1986, and the first set of 10 should be operational by December 1986.

Each missile is to be fitted with 10 warheads, but 12 could be mounted without technical difficulty. Each warhead has an explosive power equivalent to that of 300,000 short tons of TNT (272,000 smaller than some Soviet missiles. The MX has a range of 6,675 miles (10,540 kilometers) and uses four rocket stages.

The advanced guidance system is designed to give the warheads such accuracy that half of those aimed at one site would land in a circle 400 feet in diameter, with the rest nearby. UNESCO Head Under Further Pressure to Quit

By Stanley Meisler
Las Angeles Times Service
PARIS — Amadou Mahtar M'Bow, the director-general of the and Cultural Organization, is facing increasing pressure to resign or, at least, reform the agency drasti-

The latest pressures have come from a meeting in Geneva of the countries that now provide most of the agency's funds and from a change in the attitude of the French government toward Mr. M'Bow. The second factor may turn out to be the more important. Some members of the UNESCO staff, nervous about their jobs since the United States withdrew from the agency at the end of last year, be-lieve that only Mr. M'Bow's resignation can save UNESCO and that only the French government, by turning African governments against Mr. M'Bow, can force him to quit.

Unless Mr. M'Bow leaves before his present term expires at the end of 1987, according to this view, none of the industrialized countries will take seriously any attempt at reform of UNESCO. Mr. M'Bow, a former Senegalese minister of edu-cation, has rejected suggestions that he resign, characterizing the campaign against him and UNES-CO as a campaign against the Third World and blacks.

At a meeting in Geneva last week with a representative of the United States, officials of 11 industrialized countries, including France, set down a strategy for forcing reforms from Mr. M Bow. These members have not been satisfied with his promises of reform, and effectively issued an ultimatum for him to unface an exodus from the organiza-

The Netherlands, West Germa-ny, Japan and Canada have hinted that they, too, may go unless Mr. M'Bow cuts expenditures drastical-ly, stops running the agency like a personal fieldom, and takes UNESCO out of programs that the industrialized governments, resard industrialized governments regard as beyond the agency's real province. The programs most criticized are those focusing on disarmament and on the coverage and distribution of foreign news.

The change in the French posi-tion has been chronicled carefully by the Paris daily newspaper Le Monde. In the past, France has been a staunch defender both of UNESCO, one of the most prominent of the international organizations headquartered in Paris, and of Mr. M'Bow, a graduate of the French educational system. Only a few weeks ago, France pledged a grant of an extra $2 million to make up for a small part of the financial loss from the U.S. withdrawal.

But, according to Le Monde's Bernard Brigoulex, who follows UNESCO affairs closely, the French government has decided not to turn over the pledged money until Mr. M'Bow demonstrates that he is serious about reforms. France is not ready to try to force Mr. M'Bow into resignation, Mr. Bri-gouleix said, but it is ready to demand reforms from him.

In a series of articles, Mr. Brigouleix said that the hardening of France's attitude against Mr. M'Bow seems to date from the transfer a few weeks ago of the Latin American specialist Régis Debray from the staff of President dertake serious reform by May or François Mitterrand to the Council of State, a judicial body.

EC Farm Ministers Pessimistic on Pact

BRUSSELS (Reuters) - Farm ministers of the European Community looked set Wednesday for one of the longest and most difficult annual price reviews on record after making virtually no progress in their first

At least five ministers said divisions over proposals from the Executive Commission for a virtual price freeze were so deep they were now pessimistic of even being able to reach agreement even at the end of this special session.

There are even greater difficulties than originally envisaged," said the Irish agriculture minister, Austin Deasy. His French counterpart, Michel Rocard, said there was a lot of hard bargaining still to be done and he was not optimistic about the chances of agreement next week.

Thai officers said an unknown number of Vietnamese troops based in Cambodia crossed into Klong Nam Sai village, about 10 miles (15 kilometers) from Aranyaprathet, exchanged fire for 20 minutes with That troops and then called for mortar and artillery support.

The officers said one Thai soldier was seriously wounded. The Vietnamese withdrew back across the border, they said.

U.S. High Court Limits Use of Guns by Police

WASHINGTON — The Su-preme Court ruled Wednesday that the police may not shoot unarmed suspects fleeing from crimes when there is no apparent threat of harm to police officers or others. By a 6-3 vote, the court struck down a Tennessee law that authorized the police to shoot at fleeing felons, a statute said to be similar to those in about half the states. The court said the Tennessee law was unconstitutional insofar as it authorized deadly force against apparently unarmed, nondangerous fleeing suspects. "It is not better that all felony

Death at the Barricade

Contrary to Soviet claims, the sentry who killed Major Arthur D. Nicholson Jr. in an three military missions in West Germany. The East German town on Sunday apparently never fired a warning shot. Indisputably, he left the uniformed American bleeding for 30 min-utes before medical aid arrived. When the U.S. sergeant on this legal surveillance team tried to mister first aid, he was ordered away.

Sunday was a bad day on the forgotten East-West barricade. It was also an ominous reminder for Mikhail Gorbachev and Ronald Reagan that their larger diplomatic purposes are always hostage to such bloody blunders.

The superpowers owe each other, and the world, a better insurance policy against dumb, cold-blooded zealotry. The Soviet failure to explain, or apologize for, the callous downing of a South Korean airliner in 1983 froze a budding diplomacy for more than a year. Considering the proximity of their armies, the Soviet and American commanders in Central Europe have a good record for averting trouble. Most flare-ups have been political. Still, when the generals fail, a mechanism is needed for prompt explanation, apology and reassurance. If relations are healthy, ambassadors can be trusted with their accounts of such events. When suspicions dominate as now. special efforts are necessary.

The risks are especially acute in Germany because confrontations there were once a weapon of diplomacy, A 1947 accord assures the United States, Britain and France a military outpost with travel rights in East Germapatrols, in clearly marked vehicles, monitor opposing forces to assess tactical capabilities.

Soviet and East German troops are said to have increased their harassment of these surveillance sorties in recent months. Last year, a French officer was killed in a head-on collision with an East German army truck. Other teams observing maneuvers have had their jeeps bumped or turned back with warning shots. On the claim that it wanted to prevent snooping, East Germany closed some of its airspace during recent military maneuvers.

American officials say they don't under-stand these provocations. They think one explanation may be that the crack Soviet divisions in East Germany have recently shaken off tight political controls. Idle armies can grow restless and their acts of harassment can come a dangerous sport. That is why U.S. guidelines forbid the use of force or life-endangering measures against Soviet teams that enter any restricted area. A Soviet officer who ventured off-bounds in Bayaria last week was detained, then escorted back to Frankfurt.

If such a rule applied in East Germany, Major Nicholson would be alive. Beyond expressing regrets, the new Soviet leadership needs to change the rules and attitudes that can cause such a killing. And the United States needs to work with the Russians to reaffirm the rules wherever their forces meet.

- THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The Gorbachev Style

President Reagan has spoken hopefully about the prospects of an improved relationship with Moscow - an early summit meeting, for instance, and progress in arms reductions—now that Mikhail Gorbachev is in power. In the new Soviet leadership's own initial signals, however, a bit more of a hedge is evident.

Take the summit. It is a good idea. The coincidence of Mr. Reagan's re-election and Mr. Gorbachev's elevation makes this a reasonable moment to resume a political ritual with its own special combination of opportunity and risk. No major breakthrough could be expected, but it would be enough to pursue the modest purpose stated by Secretary of State George Shultz — "to review the bidding and see where we may go from here."

Somewhat to the administration's embarrassment, however, Mr. Gorbachev still has not accepted the Reagan invitation. He is "studying" it. The pause suggests a certain element of deliberation that was evident in a couple of other things that have happened in the Soviet leader's first days in power.

He -who else? -saw to it that a little extra threat was transmitted to Washington. Dusko Doder, chief of The Washington Post's Moscow bureau, has reported that the new Soviet leader sternly warned Pakistan to halt its support of the Afghan rebels, lest Moscow stir dissident tribesmen inside Pakistan. That much was expected and had happened before; the Pakistanis are standing their ground. But meanwhile, other Soviet sources conveyed to Mr. Doder that Moscow might similarly promote destabilization in Pakistan if the United States took military action against Nicaragua. This hint of linkage came in a form that could be, and soon was, officially denied. Is that to be the Gorbachev style? In a similarly ambiguous manner, the Kremlin let loose a propaganda blast, delivered by the chief Soviet negotiator, about arms control. In substance it came down to the familiar complaint - which appears to be true - that the United States wants to keep open its deployment options for a space-based missile defense. In form, however, the blast raised the question of whether the Soviet negotiator compromised the pledge of confidentiality the two sides took as they opened talks in Geneva. The answer apparently hinges on exactly when the Soviet statement was recorded.

You could call it a small matter, but at this point in the U.S.-Soviet proceedings, small matters are the subject of much attention. The two sides are feeling each other out. The tone is being set for a phase of Soviet-American relations that both sides realize is exceptionally important. It is a moment for the closest attention to "signals," sent and received.

About 15,000 Ethiopian Jews have immigrated to Israel, and perhaps 10,000 remain in ancestral villages, President Gaafar Nimeiri of Sudan wanted caught in the crossfire of civil war. The immigium on charter planes. When that airlift made headlines last year. General Nimeiri suspended it to placate Arab radicals.

Nonetheless, he agreed to an American rescue, on condition that it be kept quiet. No doubt his need for economic aid, and a planned April visit to Washington, played a part in his decision. But it also took courage.

All the Jews from Sudan now are in a country where they will no longer be strangers, and there is hope for deliverance of those still in Ethiopia. That is what will be remembered.

The Soviet Sentry's Orders

Given that only a year or so ago a Soviet lighter attacked and shot down a civilian airliner that had accidentally strayed over Soviet territory, we cannot be totally surprised by the [murder of a U.S. officer by a Russian sentry in East Germany. Yet this tragic incident, like the destruction of the airliner, is not part of some diabolical scheme to slow up a threatened thaw in East-West relations, or to quiet fears of Soviet hardliners. The Soviet sentry, like the comrade fighter-pilot, had been reared to accept that the Soviet Union is the bastion of peace constantly under siege by subversive and hostile forces, and when in doubt to shoot. There was no justification for killing Major Nicholson, and one would like to think that responsible Russians must know it.

The Daily Telegraph (London).

The death of Major Nicholson is shrouded in paradox. Even as it presages the need for arms limitation agreement it offers grim warning of how difficult such guarantees will be to verify. For what is Major Nicholson but a martyr to the monitoring of an arms accord.

1910: British Farmers Choose Canada LONDON — The tide of emigration to the "Golden West" was further evidenced [on March 25] when the Canadian Pacific Railway steamship Empress of Britain steamed from Liverpool for Canada. The vessel carried 1,500 passengers, the majority being settlers and described as the flower of the agricultural population. Some had a capital of £500 to £1,000, and the total capital of the settlers on board was computed at £55,000. Among the emigrants was a party of 200 who are taking advantage of the scheme formulated by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Ca-nadian Pacific, which is offering inducements to farmers of experience. Fifty out of eighty acres of land which the emigrant will take over will be ready for occupation, having been ploughed and put under cultivation.

1935: Hitler Outlines His Demands LONDON — The principal demands made by Chancellor Hitler in his recent conversations with Sir John Simon, Britain's foreign secretary, were: Equal strength in the air with Britain and France, the level to be governed by the strength of the Soviet air force; a fleet of 400,000 tons which would give Germany a four-fifths ratio with Britain, or practically double the French strength under the Washington Treaty [of 1922]; reunion of East Prussia with the Reich through the elimination of the Polish Corridor, and a declaration that existing eastern frontiers are not permanent; return to German rule of the 3,500,000 Teutons now in Czechoslovakia: economic union (Anschluss) with Austria. Germany will return to the League of Nations to sign a general settlement on the above basis, and not before.

Warrior Diplomacy: Reagan and the MX

219-213, we have seen a perfect example of Ronald Reagan's philosophy of politics and diplomacy.

It is based on the old political theory that it is more important to inspire fear than confidence. It is essentially Machipolitik or "power politics," and it won - but at a price. President Reagan did not convince members of Congress of the effectiveness of the MX as a weapon, but he scared them. If they did not give him more weapons, he said, he could not negotiate fewer weapons with the Russians at Geneva. And if they did not give him 21 more MXs, they would lose jobs in their states and districts, and maybe their seats in the next election. This is the warrior view of politics and diplomacy: Don't deal with the facts, deal with the votes. Don't wait or worry about what is in this new guy's mind in Moscow. Just make sure that he knows your mind is made up to build more weapons on Earth to get less, and more weapons in space whatever the cost, It is an interesting paradox. There is now, we are told, a new "Reagan Doctrine" under which the United States will support any state or group fighting for freedom against communist domination anywhere in the world. It is an extension of the Truman Doctrine, and of John F.

there is no evidence of either. Over the years, diplomatic representatives have gone by many names: legates, orators, nuncios, commissars, procurators, agents, ambassadors. Mr. Reagan has turned them into propagandists and lobbyists.

It has been astonishing and a little sad to see Max Kampelman, ordered home from his mission in Geneva to reduce missiles, running around Capitol Hill lobbying for the MX as if he were still drumming up votes for his old buddy Hubert Humphrey.

The president argued that defeat of the MX bill would tell Moscow that we were an "irresolute and divided country." Vice President George Bush, following the party line, sug-gested that the loss of the 21 missiles might mean an irretrievable loss at the nuclear arms talks in Geneva. Mr. Kampelman, who knows bet-ter and has to deal with the consequences of his lobbying when he re-turns to Geneva, could only say that defeat of the MX proposition would "inevitably delay the negotiations." Chances are the MX decision will not mean all that much. The Russians know, probably better than Americans do, that with or without additional missiles the United States has enough nuclear weapons at sea and in the air right now to survive an attack and still destroy every Soviet city and military base several times over. America has a strategy for war, but what it does not have is a strategy for peace, or the patience to see whether Kremlin and the emergence of Mik-hail Gorbachev will make a differ-alive in Europe — and the fear that seems to freeze their energy and to the International Herald Tribune.

WASHINGTON — Following the run on savings-and-loan institutions in Ohio, some observers have gone to great pains to observe that, overall, the American financial system remains sound and stable. Thus, we are reassured, there were only 79 failures last year among 15,000 commercial banks. And only nine of 3,146 federally insured thrift institutions went broke.

These numbers are accurate but do not tell the whole story. The 79 bank failures last year represent the biggest number since the Depression. And even though only nine thrifts covered by the Federal Savings and Loan In-surance Corp. failed, 64 others either

The president insists he wants to see Mr. Gorbachev. But instead of heeding his advisers and going to Konstantin Chernenko's funeral he chose to fight the MX battle to give Mr. Gorbachev a warning. This is his way of doing things, a diplomacy of power discredited from Machiavelli through the two World Wars. Sir Harold Nicolson, in his study of diplomacy, has observed that the experience of the centuries tended to prove that a negotiator, if he is to be successful, must be able to gain the confidence of the people on the other side, avoiding all appearance of nar-row short-term political advantage.

The basis of successful negotiation. Sir Harold concluded, was "moral influence," founded on seven specific cision, calm, good temper, panence, modesty and loyalty. This is not a bad definition of Mr. Kampelman's reputation, but his diplomacy has been dragged into the political pit, where such qualities are not excessively apparent, and now he must go back to Geneva, and deal with the consequences of his victory.

Europe: Frustration in a Land In-Between

P ARIS — On the eve of the 40th anniversary of the end of the war that consecrated Europe's historical decline, it has become fashionable to describe the prevailing mood as one of "Europessimism." Is such a feeling instified, or are we instead experiencing a "technocratic melancholia" such as only happy and secure societies can afford to indulge in?

Forty years have gone by, and it is remarkable - at least on the surface - how little things have changed. The security system built in the late 1940s and based on American protection and nuclear deterrence has worked well NATO has emerged victorious from its latest challenge, the Euromissile crisis, and is about to engage in a debate over Ronald Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, a challenge it will also surmount.

Divisions among the Allies of 1945 have been more than compensated by reconciliation between historical enemies. The French-German friendship has become the linchpin of the European Community. Democracy has been restored through Western Europe. The European Community, in spite of the frustration it generates, is still an attractive reality, a club that new members want to join.

Yet it is with a sense of gloom that Europeans look at themselves. From Euroterrorism to Europessimism, the concept of Europe is associated more with negative realities than with positive achievements. This is the product of complex feelings that cannot be attributed solely to high memploy-ment rates, lagging demography, un-competitive technology, or a sense of cultural stagnation.

Europeans are torn between the history is catching up with them, and not for the better. They deeply resent a loss of control over their future as much as the absence of a common quest for collective goals.

Deprived of a collective ambition or a sense of imminent fear that would force them to transcend their provincialisms, European countries set individual goals — as is the privilege, and the burden, of democracy. Europeans also are aware that they are largely spectators of their own

They know that if Europe is still at the center of world history, it is more as the main stake of the East-West competition than as an independent actor.

It can only be frustrating for Europeans to look at the race being run before them by the superpowers. They were anxious for the decline of U.S. power; now they ponder the consequences of America's new strength and of the new Soviet leader. From "star wars" to the dazzling technological exposition in Tsukuba, Japan, Europeans are contemplating projects decided over their heads or hopes, Europeans fear the destruction of the order in which they have lived cozily for 40 years.

The present exaggerated fascina-tion with the Pacific, which has been described by some Europeans as the "Mediterranean of the 21st century" - a historically absurd comparison - is at least as much the product of Europessimism as it is an urge and a signal for Europe to wake up. Dissatisfaction with the order of Yalta and the division of Europe is a further illustration of the present mood. Aware of the artificiality of the division of Europe, West Europe-ans are confused. Should they promore their own comfortable stability under an order based on a divided Europe? Or should they try to nudge the system in a way that might improve life in Eastern Europe?

Now there are new generations that have known neither war nor the challenge of reconstruction and growth, young Europeans who are dominated by fear of the future and a lack of purpose in the present. They are increasingly without guilt about their colonial past, but also without hope or enthusiasm as to what can be done in the Third World. They do not even have the escapist possibility of looking for exotic and artificial models, whether in Cuba or in Maoist China. And the end of ideologies has been accompanied not by a return to idealism, but by a rise of cynicism.

Nietzsche said: "To revive the past, to generate the future, let that be my present." Prisoners of the past. fearful of the future, Europeans have no time to appreciate the present.

When those Ohio thrifts were forced to close, it dramatically exposed the fragility of today's finan-cial structure. And this is not limited to those institutions that had private, rather than federal, insurance. The more than 3,000 federally insured savings and loan associations are a better risk than private-insured institutions because the good faith and credit of the U.S. government implicitly stands behind them. But all S&Ls have been weakened by the inflated interest-rate structure that has sharply cut the value of the out-

The blouse and long skirt was another low-key way of dressing for evening. Little black dresses were made of humble jersey and livened up with glittery accesso-ries, including rimestone-sprin-kled black velvet berets. Sporty shirts and suede pants were worn with floating rose-printed taffeta coats. Accessories were sober, with flat, pancake-like leather berets and simple gold jewelry.

Many of these simple clothes came beautifully to life in the way Saint Laurent handled his colors. mixing such improbables as mauve and chocolate, and there were interesting variations on similar hues.

For a designer who put women into pants, Saint Laurent showed a lot less than usual, occasionally giving in to the currently lashionable pants resembling long johns. New, too, were pants finished with a deep tapered cuff that looked like the top of a boot. Unlike other Paris designers, Saint Laurent did not like flat shoes, showing high heels that he was able to balance with miniskirts, a feat of sorts.

The silhouette, which stayed close to what he showed in couture three months ago, was short and skinny, with square but not exaggerated shoulders. The com-fortable, double-breasted and often hooded coats were the only important volumes in this otherwise skimpy collection. The plaid cotton raincoats were new, as were all the paisley prints, but Saint Laurent was best when he stuck to solid colors. The best new dress was cut like. a bathrobe, edged with velvet and loosely wrapped. A trio of dresses was made of paisley silks and worn with pointed Chinese hats, Jacqueline de Ribes, who as Vicomtesse de Ribes cuts a social swath in Paris, is coming to be known as the Mother Courage of fashion. In her position, she certainly did not need to enter the crazy fashion world, which is tougher than its frivolous facade would indicate.

Her fashion shows still feel like social happenings, but it now looks as if she might make it. Her presentation in a gold-trimmed salon Tuesday was attended by an impressive roster of American buyers, who may not buy in vast quantities, but must be doing well enough to be there at all. Ribes has also trimmed her prices, which makes her more competi-

Key Adviser in Oman Is Linked to CIA

Western Intelligence Seen as Major Influence in Strategic Gulf State

The following article is based on reporting by Judith Miller and Jeff Gerth and was written by Mr. Gerth. WASHINGTON — Among the foreign advisers who have played a major role in the Gulf nation of an is a former senior Central Intelligence Agency official who heads a U.S. corporation that man-significant amount of oil destined for the West passes through it. For other Americans, even such official visitors as congressional staff members, the sensitive Musandam region is off-limits, according to two U.S. officials who recently visited Oman and were not allowed to tour the area. The parent of Tetra Tech International is Tetra Tech, based in Pasadena, California. It specializes in providing products and services in the field of water and energy resources and is a subsidiary of Honeywell Inc., a leading U.S. military contractor with headquarters

Tetra Tech International helps manage several key Omani government agencies in addition to Musandam province, and the company and its parent work for both commercial and government customers in several other Middle Fastern countries, including Sandi Arabia, as well as in the United States.

The president of Tetra Tech International and the man who helped to get its contract in Oman is James H. Critchfield, who, before joining the company in 1975, had an interest in Oman, working for the CIA, both as head of the Middle East desk and later as the chief intelligence official for energy, according to former intelligence officials and public documents.

Mr. Critchfield is among about visers to the country's ruler, Sultan Qaboos bin Said. The advisers have helped shape the country's foreign and domestic policies and, like Mr. Critchfield, many have intelligence backgrounds. In an interview at the end of last year, Mr. Critchfield acknowledged that he is one of the closest U.S. advisers to Oman's ruler, and he said he no longer had anything to do with the CIA.

Such perceptions are often en-hanced by the nature of the CIA itself, the officials said, in part because the agency has a variety of relationships with outsiders rang-ing from contract employees to part-time informants to businessmen and journalists who debrief the agency on various matters.

The issue of advisers in Oman figures in an investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commis-sion into millions of dollars in pay-ments made by Ashland Oil to se-cure business in Oman.

The investigation is into possible violations by Ashland of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, which forbids payments by U.S. compa-nies to foreign officials. The recipients of some of the payments, Timothy Landon, a British military official, and Ychia Omar, a Libyan exile, have both been Omani advis-ers, according to official diplomatic

Mr. Landon and Mr. Omar have had past dealings with the CIA, according to several Omani offi-cials, former U.S. intelligence offi-cials, and the Ashland public docu-ments, which were submitted to a congressional committee and filed with the SEC.

Omar, who also no longer has official role in Oman, said that Mr. Omar would not talk with the

The relationships between foreign advisers and Oman blossomed soon after the coup in 1970 that brought Sultan Qaboos to power, according to Omani and Western officials, some of the advisers and public documents.

Since then, the advisers have been involved in writing Omani laws, establishing diplomatic rela-tionships between Oman and its neighbors, providing security for the nation's ruler and lobbying for Oman in the United States. In 1971, Robert B. Anderson, a former secretary of the treasury in the Eisenhower administration, be-came an unpaid economic adviser to the sultan. His job, he said in an interview late last year, was "to consult on ways to improve their economy" and get Oman "out from under the dominance of the Britwho arrived in the country before the U.S. advisers.

Mr. Anderson said that his Omani role was arranged in part by Ghassan Shakir, a Saudi with close ties to the United States and Mr. Anderson. Mr. Shakir also became an adviser to the sultan, as did Mr. Omar, the Libyan exile, according to U.S. intelligence officials and a gland and no longer has an official 1981 report prepared by Ashland role in Oman, declined a request to Oil lawyers for the company's 20 American, British and Arab ad- be interviewed. vestigated allegations by Ashland officials involved in Omani business ventures that payments to Mr. Omar and Mr. Landon had violat-ed the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act; it concluded that the payments did not violate the law. Mr. Omar and Mr. Shakir later came under criticism from British bankers and Omani officials for millions of dollars in commissions they made during Oman's development in the 1970s, according to Omani officials and the 1981 Ash-land report filed with the SEC. No formal charges were ever brought against the two men.

The sultan's new, outside economic advisers also became involved in foreign affairs. Mr. An-derson said he was personally responsible for Oman's re-estabishing diplomatic relations with such neighbors as Saudi Arabia.

In 1971, as a result of Mr. Anderson's close ties with King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, Sultan Qaboos made a state visit to Saudi Arabia, lead-ing to the establishment of diplo-matic relations between the two countries, according to Mr. Anderson and U.S. and Omani officials.

C. Patrick Quinlan, who was charge d'affaires and the highest-ranking State Department official in the country in the early 1970s, said in an interview in 1983 that he had raised questions about CIA connections to Omani advisers. Mr. Quinlan said his protests were based on his concern that foreign policy was being undermined by ck-channel discussions. "I discovered that the CIA had connections with Robert Anderson and Omar," he said.

Mr. Quinlan said he recom-mended that ties between the CIA and the Omani advisers be dropped, but soon changed jobs and never heard from the State Department

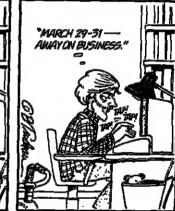

State Department officials said that they were unable to find the relevant documents in response to a two-year effort to obtain them under the Freedom of Information

286,500 copies and more than 2 million readers in France, 42,300 copies abroad... Every Monday, such is the performance of Le Point, this French newsmagazine created in 1972, and which has since made spectacular progress inside and outside France. Two editions (national and international), but above all the most interesting readership. Let's judge...

Readers of the national edition are managers or executives (56 %) with a high purchasing power (54 % earn more than 120,000 FF/year); they are young (42 % are under 35) and live in big cities (58% are in towns of more than 100,000 inhabitants).

People in charge, male (60%), who are defined by all surveys as enterprising and serious, but also great travellers, sportsmen, music and cinema lovers_ extraverted and extravagant.

All this is confirmed by the EBRS and the recent survey conducted amongst readers of the international edition of Le Point. All the moreso in that these readers have a still higher income (50% earn more that 250,000 FF/year).

7 Spanish Officers Dismissed In Drive to Demilitarize Police

MADRID - The Spanish government has dismissed seven senior police officers to counter unrest over a campaign to demilitarize the force, Interior Ministry officials said Wednesday. The officers were all army men who opposed plans to convert the force of 50,000 into a civilian organization. Spain's other major police force, the civil guard, is to remain under military control. In another development, a police unit of about 300 men was disbanded in the northern city of León. They men had staged a sit-in this month to force the resignation of their commander, Captain Francisco Javier Alvarez of the army, whom they accused of despotic be-

JERUSALEM (AP) - A tiny cave found in 1983 in the southern Negev Desert has yielded thou-sands of prehistoric objects, including what is believed to be the oldest fabric ever found, and evidence of a 9,000-year-old religion, the Israel Museum has announced.

Meir Meir, the museum's vice president, called the discovery one of the most important in the last 25 years. The cave is in a desert valley west of the Dead Sea called Nahal Hemar, "river of asphalt," near what is believed to be the location of biblical Sodom, about 50 miles (80 kilometers) south of Jerusalem, Tamar Noy, a museum curator, said most of the objects were probably used for religious ceremonies. She said that a napkin-sized cloth of woven flax was in a style anthropologists were familiar with, from impressions in ancient clay, but that no cloth this old had been

It is important to act before a situation "solidifies around you," he explained in an inter-view last month, "You really only have a matter of months to set the direction."
But even for Sir Michael, the recent pace has been unusually rapid. He had scarcely settled in as chairman of International Computers Ltd., Britain's largest computer maker, when it was taken over last summer. .

Sir Michael was soon appoint-ed chairman of Dunlop Holdings PLC, the troubled tire and sport-ing goods manufacturer, but by early this month he had received a takeover offer from BTR PLC, a rapidly expanding industrial conglomerate, that was too good

With Dunlop sold, no one expects the 54-year-old Sir Michael to continue nursing the company much longer, even though his employment contract has more than two years to run.

Speculation is widespread that he will soon succeed Ian Mac-Gregor as head of Britain's strike-weakened National Coal Board, despite Sir Michael's public denial of reports that he has discussed the job with government representatives and board officials. He has let it be known that he would be more interested in private-sector em-

Japan to Extend Auto Quotas at Increased Level

TOKYO - Japan will maintain voluntary restrictions on car ex-ports to the United States by limit-ing shipments to between 2.2 million and 2.3 million autos, or about 25 percent more than the current year, government sources said Wednesday.

The Ministry of International Trade and Industry, which oversees Japan's foreign trade, will negotiste with the nation's 11 major automakers on quotas for their ship-ments to the United States for the year beginning April 1, the sources

The outcome of those negotia-tions was scheduled to be reported

According to trade ministry calculations, Japanese car exports to the United States would reach 2.7 million units in fiscal 1985 without any controls.

The 2.2- to 2.3-million ceiling set by the ministry represents an in-crease of about 25 percent, or $3 billion, over the current year.

The Japanese automobile industry, under pressure from Washington, has exercised voluntary re-straints on exports to the United States since 1981. The ceiling for the year ending March 31 was 1.85

The Reagan administration earlier this month said the United States would not pressure Japan for an extension of the controls.

Japan's huge trade surplus with the United States, amounting to $34.7 billion last year, apparently was a factor behind the ministry

Japanese automakers, asserting they will preserve "orderly market-ing," have called for the lifting of the voluntary limits. "it's nonsense. The matter should be left to the discretion of automakers," said Takashi Ishi-hara, president of Nissan Motor Problems are anticipated in ne-gotiations between the trade ministry and the auto industry over quotas, since individual manufacturers are expected to demand that they be allowed to carry out their con-tracts with U.S. makers.

Mitsubishi Motors Co. said it wants to deliver 200,000 cars a year to its affiliate, Chrysler Corp., according to their contract. Isuzu Motors Ltd. and Suzuki Motor Co. also want to meet their contracts, calling for delivery of 284,000 cars to General Motors Corp., which has a stake in the two Japanese automakers.

■ Warning From U.S.

The Reagan administration warned Japan on Wednesday that its decision to impose a new quota on auto exports "is not a substitute" for opening its own market to U.S. products and is not a real restraint at all, United Press International reported from Washing-

The White House spokesman, Larry Speakes, said, "It's the president's position that export restraints are not an acceptable substitute for market opening. Export restraints are contrary to both the spirit and objective of the agreement between the president and the

Israel Rejects IMF Suggestion On Budget Cuts

Washington Post Service WASHINGTON - The Israeli government has rejected an International Monetary Fund recommendation that Israci double a planned budget cut of about $1 billion, according to sources here.

Although an IMF team found "encouraging develop-ments" in the Israeli economy, it expressed concern that any gains in controlling inflation would prove to be only temporary without a deeper budget

The IMF visit was for routine consultation; Israel has not remested financial aid from the IMF. But it has asked for $800 million in emergency aid from the United States, on top of $2.6 billion in economic and military assistance already committed for fiscal 1985 and $4.05 billion planned for fiscal

- 4 EC Countries Allowed To Raise Steel Subsidies

BRUSSELS - European Community industry ministers reached a compromise Wednesday that will allow some member states to increase subsidies to their steel industry this year.

The countries that have asked for such authorization are France, Italy, Belgium and Luxembourg. The authorization is necessary under the terms of the EC's plan to return the European steel industry to profitability. At the same time, the ministers stop steel subsidies by Dec. 31, as called for by the plan. Wednesday's compromise allowing the increases in subsidies was reached in exchange for a commit-

OF the three Soong sisters, it is now said in China: "One loved money, one loved power, one loved China." The money-lover was Ai-ling who made a fortune as a specula-tor while married to H. H. Kung, the equally wealthy financier who served intermittently as finance minister of the Chinese Republic. The power-lover was May-ling, who married Gen-eralissimo Chiang Kai-shek and, as the dragon lady Madame Chiang, helped to sell the United States on backing Nationalist China during World War II. The China-lover was Chingling, who married Dr. Sun Yat-sen, the revolu-tionary founder of the Republic of China, and who after his death became a vice chairman of Mao Zedong's People's Republic of China.

Of their brother, T. V. Soong, the Harvard-educated business tyooon who became Chiang Kai-shek's prime minister, it is merely said that for a time he was the richest man in the world. So as far as the influence the Soongs exerted, it is not far-fetched of the journalist Sterling Seagrave to begin his richly detailed history of the family by asserting, "Few families since the Borgias have played such a disturbing role in Juntaly history." human history.

Nor is the statement an exaggeration in terms of the family's malignancy. The most dramatic revelations of "The Soong Dynasty" concern Chiang Kai-shek's involvement with the criminal underground - in particular one Big-Eared Tu, the godfather of Shanghai's notorious Green Gang, who bolstered Chiang's regime through drugs, extortion, and political muscle, and exterminated dissenters by the tens of thousands, But except for Sun Yat-sen's widow, Ching-ling, who refused to be drawn into Chiang Kai-shek's orbit, every member of the family is convincingly painted monstrous by Seagrave in one or another special way.

If Seagrave has any problem, it lies in sus-taining the drama of his revelations. As he points out in his prologue, writing about the Soongs poses "special difficulties" because like the Cheshire Cat, they "were visible only when they wished to be." Because so much about them remains hidden, he has "chosen a way of the controlling the Sooner that it less tables." revealing the Soongs that is less subject to

Most appalling of all is Scagrave's study Big-cared Tu Yuch-sheng who, with two as ciates known as Pockmarked Huang Chiang. and Onio Chang Ching-chang (for his per teering in Chinese antiquities), ran the Shi hai underworld with spectacularly insoers brutality. memoir, "Shark's Fins and Millet."

And this bears upon the major shortcom of "The Soong Dynasty": So much it pends on previously published books the mevitably creates a sense of deja va. Deg many revelations gleaned through the F dom of Information Act, there remains a se that one has read much of this before.

Of course the point is that Seagrave journalist who grew up in the 1940s on China-Burma border — has put the story settler as it has not been done previously.

As he sums up T. V. Soong's "operatic or ship of America" in the 1930s: "The SA (7) family would serve as the courtiers, the h maidens, and the compradors. They would the terms, carry the moneybags, keep the counting ledgers, and be responsible for id fying all enemies and villains. The Ur-States's role would be to provide the fund return for their money, Americans would charge of feeling virtuous."

Still the greatest excitement of "The S Dynasty" lies in the author's introductor nouncement of what it accomplishes: "book is the first biography of the whole and the first to examine both their posessibutions and their posessibutions and their posessibutions and their lone hidden more contributions and their long-hidden, mon ister activities. When all the clan member brought together in a single study, it is pos to see how they helped and hindered each in the path to power, and to see in sharp their regime's long involvement with an pendence upon the Shanghai gangster a world."

After this, the proof of the pudding a pressingly familiar. By his method of all away from Medusa we are forced by Sea to look at too much of what we already a about the long and tortous struggle for co of 20th-century China.

Indiana's Knight Still Casual, Candid, Controversial

Bobby Knight: 'If you win, people seem to care what you do.'

NEW YORK - Five college coaches attended a news conference Monday at the Hall of Fame club in Madison Square Garden. Four of them — Lou Camesecca of St. John's, Don DeVoe of Tennessee, Walt Hazzard of UCLA and Bob Dotson, assistant to Denny Crum at Louisville — wore suits and ties. The fifth wore a green polka-dot shirt open at the collar, a tan golf sweater with a "Bogie Busters" inscription on the left breast, and a folded sports magazine in the back pocket of his brown slacks. Never mind. Indiana's Bobby Knight has made a career of marching to the tootle of his own flate.

Knight is easily one of the country's most contro-versial and volatile basketball coaches on any level and one of the most successful for winning games and for players who have earned college degrees.

About the last time New York andiences saw Knight coaching — that is, after he had noodied the Olympic team to a gold medal in Los Angeles — was on film chips during the Purdue game Feb. 23, when he first a chairman that is, after he had noodied the Olympic team to a gold medal in Los Angeles — was on film chips during the Purdue game Feb. 23, when he flung a chair across the court in a moment of high dudgeon at an official's call. In turn, Knight was flung out of the game and the Big 10 Conference suspended him for another. New York fans were to see Knight in the flesh

Wednesday night when Indiana played Tennessee in the Garden in the semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament, Louisville was to meet UCLA in the second game. Carnesecca's team is in the final four of another cornament this weekend, one Knight knows quite well; in 1976 and 1981, his Hoosiers won the NCAA tide. This year, with an 18-13 record (his worst in 14 years at Indiana), they weren't invited to the primary postseason tournament and instead accepted a bid to the NIT, an admittedly lesser meet.

"Tve always liked the NIT," said Knight, who has won it twice and who remembers following

Basketball

ment as a teenager in Ohio.

Thirty years later, Knight sometimes throws tantrums that would have embarrassed a 15-year-old.

In fact, they embarrassed a 45-year-old.
"I'm intelligent enough to know what I did was dumb," he said. "But it's the long story of my frustration over the officiating. I was in control though, even if it seemed I wasn't. The first thing I thought of throwing was my sport jacket, but I didn't have one on. Then I reached into my pocket and grabbed my money. But I decided against that

So I took the next handy thing, the chair, and scooted it across the floor. But I made sure I didn't throw it hard enough to hart anybody."

Of course, there have been more than one incident of odious behavior. While he coached the U.S. team in the '79 Pan Am Games, he was involved in an altercation with a Puerto Rican policeman and was charged in absentia with aggravated assault.

And there is his severely abusive language while coaching his players. This season has seen odd punishments meted out during a losing streak. Knight refused to allow two players he'd put in his doghouse to ride on the plane and the bus with the others. And he dismissed Mike Giorni for "academic reasons" despite Giorni's having improved on his grades the previous semester.

"I hold my players to a higher academic standard than the NCAA," he said, "because the NCAA is' concerned with players' being eligible. I'm concerned with them graduating." Asked how he felt about his volatile image, he said: "If you win, people seem to care what you do." Knight still says what he thinks. The George-town-St. John's game? "Georgetown has the better team, the better intensity, the better players. And I don't care if St. John's or St. Cecilia's or St. Ambrose plays Georgetown. They can start five saints and they'll still lose."

"I don't think it makes any difference whether you fund them or not, I doubt if we'll get around to talking seriously about anything "Why then?"

"Well, the Soviet delegation doesn't have a chance to leave the motherland very often, and they would love to hang around Switzer-land for a while. They know if they become serious too early they could wind up spending next winter in Moscow. Our diplomats always stay on per diem as long as they

The president message to the world that this maintains that if Congress doesn't country has only one commander-authorize a bil- in-chief. The MX may be useless as a weapon, but at the same time it says a lot about what kind of people we are

"Look, if you wish to build more MX's, go right ahead. It's no skin off our backs," Blini said. "What do you want our people to do?"
"They could have the decency to threaten to walk out of the talks if the U.S. Congress votes the money for the new ones."

"Our negotiators can't afford to do that," the diplomat said. "If they walked out, they would have to fly home immediately and none of them have done their shopping

"How can your people think of shopping when both superpowers are on the brink?" I said.

What you have to understand about Soviet delegations is that when they go abroad they not only shop for themselves, but also for their relatives and superiors. If our disarmament officials came back to Moscow from Geneva without Swiss chocolate and cuckoo clocks. their mission would be considered a failure. That is why the Russians are going to string out the talks as long as they can."

J. P. Léaud: Truffaut's 'Antoine' at 40

By Nan Robertson New York Times Service

JEW YORK — Antoine Doinel is almost 41 years old. Or, rather, Jean-Pierre Leand is entering middle age. It is difficult to separate the two. Autoine was the sensitive, rebellious boy of 14 immortalized by François Truffaut in his first semiautobio-graphical film, "The 400 Blows," in 1959. Léaud played Antoine, giving a heartbreaking and mem-orable performance.

In four subsequent movies over 20 years. Truffant gave audiences the unusual experience of watching Léaud, as Antoine, grow up, fail in love, marry, divorce and, mainly, chase women. In private life, the actor has never married, but he says, "It's high time I did."

Leand recently made a rare, brief visit to New York to honor the memory of his friend Truf-faut, who died last October at age 52, and to focus attention on the first general re-release in the United States of "The 400 Blows." It will be followed later in the spring by Truffaut's "Jules and Jim.

Perched as if ready for flight in the French Film Office above Fifth Avenue - he dislikes, and seldom gives, interviews - he shrugs, waves his arms about, clenches his fists, shakes his forefinger, purses his lips, rolls his eyes toward heaven. He says he is a creature of the inema, and it has been his whole life. His mother was an actress: his father wrote for films and the theater. Their son now has 33 movie roles behind him and has pelled from half a dozen boarding worked with some of Europe's schools by the age of 13, he said, greatest directors in addition to because "I couldn't adjust." He Truffaut: Jean-Luc Godard Bersent a great deal of his time nardo Bertolucci. Pier Paolo Pasolini, Jean Eustache. He has just my pals in the dormitories." finished shooting the latest Go-dard movie, "The Detective."

tual father." In Antoine Doine! "1 found my brother," he said. It was no accident that the director dedicated to his protege an unre-lated film — "The Wild Child" in which the teacher learns as much as the student. After ending the Doinel series in 1979 with "Love on the Rim," Truffant said the character was "a synthesis of two real-life people — Jean-Pierre and myself. He's a mix, like mayonnaise. You can no longer separate the elements."

Like Truffant, Léand had a troubled childhood. He was exwriting and acting out stories for Leand said that 40 boys had already been auditioned when he Leand calls Truffaut "my spiri- read in a newspaper that Truffaut was looking for "a young guy" to play the lead in his first feature film. He believes the director quoted as saying he ended the chose him because of his "aggressive shyness" and "an intense desire to get the role that just poured out of the screen test." He found Truffant a relaxed and sympathetic director who "treated children like human beings" and the character of An-toine Doinel with "immense tendemess." A mischievous smile lighted up the actor's face. "In chool, the teachers were always punishing the kids and telling us to keep quiet. In the film, the adults shut up and I talked. That was something new and agreeable

From the immensely appealing, unloved boy of "The 400 Blows," Antoine Doinel grew into an adult who seemed less and less sympathetic to many critics and film buffs. Truffaut was Doinel series because the character stopped maturing: "I can see a similarity between Doinel and Jean-Pierre not wanting to grow up, but I can't say I approve."

Leand bridled slightly. With eyes cast down, he menculously lined up four packets of sugar on a table before him, bringing to mind the scene in "The 400 Blows" where Antoine folds and smooths bits of paper while being questioned by a psychiatrist.

"François liked Antoine Doine a lot," he said at last."He forgave him many things. It's true, Antoine kept part of his childhood with him. But I think he was a sentimentalist. He had no social ambitions. He didn't want to be famous or successful or make a lot of money. His only preoccupation in life was to pur-sue and find love."

The Chinese Culture Ministry censored "Kramer vs. Kramer" and "The Turning Point," two of the movies to be screened in an American film festival in April, according to U.S. officials in Beijing. The officials said a brief bedroom scene from "The Turning Point" and a sequence in which Dustin Hoffman's son sees his father's girl-friend nude in "Kramer vs. Kramer" were trimmed. Also to be shown are "Star Wars," "On Golden Pond" and "Coalminer's ored the United States's 33c Daughter." About 20 million tick-dent, Harry S. Truman, pre
